Mrs. Roosevelt Assailed in Her Effort to Protect Consumers

WASHINGTON—The Consumer—chief forgotten man of the Administration—gradually is coming into his own. Alarmed at rising prices and the protest of housewives, officials are now giving greater consideration to consumer protection.

But it was an uphill fight. Industry, the big food distributors, all were against the consumer. And so powerful was their influence that many Administration officials bowed before them.

Not even Mrs. Roosevelt, first Housewife of the Land, carried weight with certain parts of her husband's Administration. For instance, Mrs. Roosevelt, at one of her press conferences made the following statement regarding consumer protection:

"I think all goods sold to the public should be labeled as to their grades and quality. Without this the consumer cannot know what he is buying. This is the only way the consumer can intelligently have a hold on the market. I mean authentic grades and standards."

But when the Consumers' Council of the AAA picked this up for republication in its bulletin, higher officials in the AAA objected. They insisted on censoring the President's wife. So not until today was her statement published.

Broke

White-haired Chairman Jesse Jones has a sympathetic understanding these days when business men come to the RFC with the old plea: "We've plenty of assets, but we need cash."

With Mrs. Jones, he attended a bridge party. Mrs. Jones is an expert, but Chairman Jesse hadn't played for more than a year. His cards were terrible. At the end of the evening he owed $2.

He fumbled through his pockets, fumbled harder, turned pink, then crimson. Chairman Jesse may handle millions for Uncle Sam every day; he may have one of the largest fortunes in public life, he may own acres in Texas. But also he has that human male failing of forgetting to transfer his wallet when changing his pants.

"I... I'm sorry," he stammered. "I'm afraid Mrs. Jones will have to bail me out."

And Mrs. Jones, with a diabolical grin, paid the $2.

Real Test

Neither the soldier bonus vote in the House nor the Senate rejection of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty was a real test of Presidential strength on Capitol Hill.

Neither questions in any way involved the President's Recovery Program, and neither was of his making. The House, being what it is, always goes pro-bonus in election years. The St. Lawrence was the work of President Hoover, and he failed twice even to bring it to a vote.

But two issues which really will test Roosevelt's hold on Congress are the Dies silver remonetization bill and the revolutionary tariff-making reform measure. The first, Roosevelt opposes as being directly counter to his monetary program. The second he is sponsoring.

The tariff bill will be passed, although in not quite as sweeping form as originally proposed by the President. The House Ways and Means committee already has modified it slightly, and before the House as a whole plus the Senate get through with it, it will be still further limited. But the essentials of the bill, giving the President tariff-making powers in the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements, will remain, and the bill will become law.

The outcome on the silver bill rest with the Republicans in the Senate. If they play politics—cast aside legislation and vote for it solely to embarrass the Administration—then the chances are strong the measure will get Senate approval, although in amended form.

It will then be up to the President either to vote or accept the

NORTH'RN OHIO CITIES STRUCK BY GALE TODAY

Drop to 14 Degrees Tonight Predicted as Temperature Falls

DAMAGE IS DONE

Strong Wind Accompanies Snow and Sleet

Despite the fact that Spring is supposed to be officially here, winter went on his latest rampage without concern or respect for the entrance of Lady Spring.

Accompanied by a drop in temperatures, the winter storm rode into the state last night pelting

MERCURY FALLING

Dr. H. R. Clarke reported the temperature five degrees colder at noon, Tuesday, than at 7 a. m. The 12 o'clock mark was 30 degrees. Monday's high was 60 degrees the figure holding until 5 p. m. when it began to fall. Rain-fall totaled .21 of an inch.

a cold rain which turned to sleet, encasing the north central section in a sheath of ice, disrupting power and communication systems and badly snarling traffic.

PHONE LINES DOWN

Several sections, such as Kenton, were virtually isolated from outside communication as the ice-strained power and telephone lines cracked and fell.

Practically all rural lines in northwestern Ohio were down. Fremont, Fostoria, Findlay, Lorain and Toledo areas were among the sections hardest hit.

At Toledo, snow was piled from three to five inches.

Thousands of dollars damage was done by the storm in the vicinity of Napoleon where the hail, rain and sleet tore down trees and high tension and electrical wire. Business was badly crippled.

Extensive damage was feared for fruit crops in the northern sections as a result of the storm. Temperatures in Columbus, which was bathed with a drizzling rain throughout the night, began falling this morning and it was

A Thought for Holy Week!

By REV. T. C. HARPER
Luke 21:37. "And in the day time He was teaching in the temple; and at night He went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives."

In this verse we find the key to the most remarkable life ever lived. Jesus' entire ministry was an active one. It was a ministry that made constant demands upon His energy. That last week was an unusually busy, strenuous, exacting one. From the hour of His triumphal entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday to another day when He staggered through one of its gates beneath the weight of a heavy wooden cross He was under continuous strain. There could be

County Offered Radio Advantage

The service of the radio broadcasting station of the state highway patrol has been offered to Pickaway-co through the office of Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

A communication received today by Sheriff Radcliff from Lynn Black, superintendent of the highway patrol, asked co-operation and also promised co-operation. Black's letter said:

"The state highway patrol has now under construction a radio broadcasting station at Columbus which is designed as the Central Station of an eventual state-wide radio net work.

"The Buckeye Sheriffs Association Station WPGG at Findlay, now in operation, will work in conjunction with this station immediately it is ready for operation, which will probably be April 10th. The Association has already installed approximately 57 station receivers and 23 car receivers in various departments in the north-west portion of the state. In addition, each of the Highway Patrol Stations and cars are being equipped with receivers as rapidly as possible.

"We are offering the services of this station to all police departments and sheriffs offices in Ohio, and hope that you will find this service of value to your department. The Federal Radio Commission has assigned us a frequency of 1682 k. c., and we expect eventually to have a group of stations on this frequency sufficient to cover the entire state. The tests recently made show us that at all times with station receivers at a radius of 80 or 90 miles from these two stations, and a conservative radius of 55 miles for automobile receivers.

"It is hoped that your Department can see its way clear to establish monitored receivers on either the Columbus station or the Findlay station, if you are within radius distance, so that the effective value of this circuit will be as high as possible."

Drive to Tighten Traffic Laws Is On In Chillicothe

Mayor Cady Fines Columbus Driver $3 For Running Two Red Lights.

Chillicothe started a campaign today similar to that which has been going on here since Jan. 1. It is an effort to correct traffic conditions by tightening the laws.

Mayor Walter Barrett of the Ross-co city gave his police orders Monday to begin the campaign Tuesday. All traffic ordinances including all-night parking, double parking, the two-hour parking limit, and observance of stop-street signs. All cars must be off the streets by midnight.

First offenders will be fined $1 but second offenders are warned that a much stiffer fine faces them. An extra officer is being placed on duty to aid in the enforcement of the ordinances.

Mayor W. E. Cady added $3 to his list of collections for March, Monday evening, when C. R. Chappelear, 209 E. Fifth-ave, Columbus, was fined for first and second offenses.

He ran red lights at Franklin and Mound-sts on Court at 9:50 p. m. Monday. Taken into court the Mayor fined him for two offenses. He paid. The arrest was made by Officers McCready and Radcliff.

BIDS FOR NEW AIR CONTRACTS ASKED BY FDR

U. S. Mail to Return to Private Airlines on Temporary Basis

DETAILS MISSING

Congress to Enact New Laws for Air Mail

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The administration took the first step toward returning the air mail service to private operation today by issuing a call for new bids immediately.

The new bids will be asked on a temporary basis, pending the enactment by Congress of the new and permanent air mail legislation.

Announcement that air mail bids would be asked of commercial companies immediately was made by the president in his semi-weekly press conference today.

The news was given out in the form of a simple oral statement by the president that at 2:30 today he would go over the new post office proposal for asking bids on air mail from commercial companies.

REFUSES TO EXPLAIN

The president was immediately flooded with questions as to how he would ask for such bids pending legislation, and whether old companies whose contracts were rescinded in the general cancellation order some time ago could bid under the new plan.

To these questions the president replied that he could not go into details.

The only detail revealed today was that the new set-up will em-

Tugwell, Others Listed By Fish As Probe in Congress Is Looming.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Adding fuel to the charges hurled at the "brain trust" by Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) educator, Rep. Fish (R) named his own list of "radicals" in the service of the administration.

Joining in the demand for a congressional investigation of Dr. Wirt's charges that the "brain trust" are seeking to establish a new form of government, Fish declared that "the situation is well known to those who have watched developments."

Turning to the files of the House committee which investigated communist propaganda in 1931, Fish named 12 figures in the administration whose names figured in the inquiry.

While disclaiming any intention to brand "brain trust" as Communists, Fish said the 12 were associated with the American Civil Liberties Union.

BEN ARNESON.

Fellowship Chest Presented by North Columbus Club; Evening Is Enjoyed.

Members of the local Kiwanis club, guests and visitors from the Columbus Northwest, Delaware, and Chillicothe clubs enjoyed a splendid meeting at Hanley's restaurant, Monday evening, when Jules Brazil, member of the New York staff of the National Broadcasting Co., was the featured entertainer.

The local club received the Fellowship chest, a project of the district Kiwanis organization, from the Northwest club. The Circleville club will in turn carry the chest to Portsmouth next Wednesday evening. The club having the highest percentage of attendance at its home and out-of-town meetings receives recognition at the close of the club year.

The chest was presented to E. I. Gephart, acting as toastmaster, by Dr. Woodward, president of the Columbus club.

STRESSES FUTURE

The meeting also was honored by the presence of Ben Arneson, Delaware, lieutenant governor of the Kiwanis district, who counted the evening as his official visit to the club. In a short talk he urged Kiwanians to build for the future by supporting improvements in our social and home life in order to eliminate the under-privileged children problem.

Mr. Brazil proved the highlight of the evening. Prior to the meeting he met a number of the Kiwanians and guests and there were many others whom he did not meet but who were pointed out to him. During his part of the program he called nearly all the visitors by name and occupation in "cracking" jokes about them. His rendition of songs, especially those presented in years gone by by the famous Harry Lauder, was a feature of his program.

Sixty-five persons including J. Erie Nutt and Alvin Jones, president and past president of the Chillicothe club, attended the meeting. Stuart Spangler, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Spangler, also attended the meeting. He is secretary of the Northwest Columbus club.

PRISON GATES CLOSE BEHIND 3 CONVICTED DILLINGER GANGSTERS

Uneventful Trip Reported From Lima to Columbus With 13 Automobiles in Caravan; Machine-Guns, Held by Guards, Cover Any Possible Attack by Mobsters; Pierpont and Makley to Die, Clark Faces Life Term.

COLUMBUS, March 27.—The massive steel gates of the Ohio penitentiary swung shut today behind three members of the desperate John Dillinger gang, two of whom are to die in the electric chair on July 13 for murder of Allen-co sheriff, Jess Sarber, on Oct. 12 last.

Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley, who face death in the electric chair, and Russell Clark, sentenced to life imprisonment, were received at the penitentiary at 12:30 p. m.

The caravan of 13 automobiles bearing the Dillinger gangsters completed the uneventful journey of 95 miles from Lima in approximately three hours.

BUSH IN CHARGE

Brig. Gen. Harold N. Bush of the Ohio National guard, was in personal command of the transfer of the prisoners and took every precaution to forestall an attempt by the gang leader, Dillinger, who is at liberty, to free his pals.

Gen. Bush reported that the entire trip was without incident except for hazardous traveling over ice-crusted roads in northern Ohio.

He surprised a large crowd of newspapermen and photographers awaiting the caravan's arrival at the main gates by slipping quietly through the seldom-opened west gate of the penitentiary.

Pierpont was the first to be checked in at the prison. He was given the prison number 68129. Makley was assigned No. 68130 and Clark No. 68131.

CROWDS HALTED

For a block in each direction the large crowds of curious persons attracted by advance news of the impending arrival of the nationally-feared desperadoes were held back by squadrons of police. No one without a pass from Adjutant General Henderson was permitted inside the "deadline."

The state of Ohio was taking chances on the convicted mobster slipping through its fingers as the leader, John Dillinger, did in Indiana some weeks ago.

Customarily a prisoner is checked in at the clerk's office where his answers to questions necessary to filling out his entrance card, but this formality was abandoned in the case of Pierpont, Makley and Clark.

The escort for the last ride of the three gangsters was comprised of 45 Ohio National Guardsmen, 13 automobiles, including two open trucks on which were mounted machine guns, and several squads of state highway patrolmen.

The armed caravan was led by Sheriff Don Sarber, son of the slain officer.

SCOUTED HIGHWAY

Sheriff Sarber's car scouted the road about three or four miles in advance of two other scout cars which were being used to block and prevent any sudden attack from by-roads on the 95-mile route to Columbus.

Behind the two scout cars came a machine gun truck, manned by national guardsmen. Then came three cars, each bearing one of the prisoners. Following these was another machine gun truck, which was trailed at intervals by the remainder of the automobiles in the procession.

TAX PROGRAM VOTE IS NEAR

Permanent Decision on Income Tax May Be Known Late Thursday.

COLUMBUS, March 27.—The permanent tax program based on the income tax was expected to stand or fall in the house of representatives before tonight.

Rep. P. E. Ward's income tax bill, basis of the tax program offered as the only substitute for the 3 per cent sales tax, was scheduled to come up for final passage in the lower house this afternoon.

In the event it fails to receive the endorsement of the legislature, tax experts are positive in their statement that there remains no other alternative than to enact the sales tax proposed by the White administration.

Long hours of spirited debate were certain to precede a roll call on the income tax measure, action on which was postponed last week to give the solons an opportunity to discuss the tax programs with their constituents.

The graduated rates from one to 7 per cent on earned incomes, or those under $25,000, with an additional levy of 25 per cent of the tax on "unearned" incomes of $25,000 or more.

It grants $700 exemption to single persons, $1,800 to married persons and allows $300 deductions for each dependent deriving the major portion of their support from the persons taxed.

He is teaching in the afternoon while P. R. Bowen, who took his place while he was in the hospital, is handling the morning classes.

C. F. Zaenglein, manual arts and instrumental music instructor, is reported making a good recovery at Berger hospital.

COUNTY DADS TO BUY AUTOMOBILE

Bids were received from nine dealers, Monday, but no action was taken on the purchase pending the demonstration.

Contract for purchase of six truck tires was let Monday afternoon to Ben H. Gordon on his bid of $269.36. There were seven other bids for the contract.

Two tires are to be used for each of three trucks, a Schacht, a Starling, and a GMC.

NEW COACH TO SURVEY 'BUCK' GRID HOPEFULS

Schmidt Due From Fort Worth Today; 90 Football Men To Greet Him.

COLUMBUS, March 27.—A slightly quizzical bunch of football aspirants, curious to get a line on this fellow Francis A. Schmidt, who has been named head football coach of Ohio State University, were preparing today to turn out for the spring gridiron session opening tomorrow.

A squad of about 90 is expected to show up for the initial spring practice, which will give the new Buckeye mentor a line on what material he will have available when the football season officially rolls around next fall.

Schmidt is coming up from Fort Worth, Texas, to launch the spring football activities at Ohio State. He plans to stay here for the early training session, after which he will return to Texas, gather up his furniture and wife, and move to Columbus for a protracted sojourn as the Buckeye gridiron mentor.

SQUAD PREPARES

Among the football aspirants for the 1934 Ohio State team, there was considerable and natural speculation today as to the new coach—as much perhaps as there was probably speculation on the part of Schmidt himself as to what sort of material he is going to have to work with this season.

Texas, where Schmidt won the reputation that finally brought him to Ohio State, has been virtually drained of all the information, including the past, present, predicted future and eccentricities concerning the new coach.

One thing appears certain and that is that the Ohio State gridiron aspirants are going to have to toe the mark for Schmidt and there will be no buts, ifs or ands. It will be merely a case of "either or else." And this apparently is going to be the status of football as a whole as long as Schmidt is in charge.

As one Texan, writing to tip off Columbus friends about Schmidt, put it:

"This coach is a hit hard-headed in the sense that he usually knows what he wants and will not brook much interference in getting it."

The Texan predicts that with "a certain amount of forcefulness on the part of alumni and the athletic department," that Schmidt should accomplish results.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

DAVIS J. Walsh, International News Service sports writer, sees a precedent today by picking two teams to win the National league championship. * * * Walsh, after carefully surveying the Old circuit, says New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals are an even bet. * * * He picks one of the two to cop the gonfalon but doesn't give either the edge over the other. * * *

The writer shows that out of 29 years of world series play the champion has failed to repeat the next time out. * * * Both Giants and Cards have great pitching, Walsh relates, while the Cardinals have the best infield and the Cards the best hitting. * * * He cites the addition of Virgil Davis, catcher, to the Cards as one of the big factors in the pennant race. * * *

We believe the addition of Paul Dean will help the Cardinals. * * * This youthful right-hander who has done well in spring practice joins with his brother, Jerome, Tex Carleton, Bill Hallahan, Jess Haines, Bill Walker and others to make the St. Louis club a remarkable staff. * * * The two Deans, Carleton and Hallahan are capable of working every fourth day with ease while Haines can be given "spots" and Walker can be used whenever the occasion calls. * * *

Walsh picks the other clubs to finish in this order: Chicago, Pittsburgh, Boston, Brooklyn, Cincinnati and Philadelphia. * * *

Columbus' Red Birds are having fun in the training season. * * * Not certain what help will be forthcoming from the parent club, the Cardinals, the Birds have been performing with makeshift lineups and rank rookies doing the hurrying duties. * * * They beat the Sebring firemen, 20-6, Monday, with Coach, Anderson, and Julian Foster, Vanderbilt athlete, leading the Red Bird hitting. * * * A couple of pitchers, a shortstop and an outfielder are needed by the Red Birds at this time. * * *

According to our always reliable reports, there are some very nice early non-explosive pineapples on the market.

U. S. EMPLOYMENT OFFICE SEEKS JOBS

Any Person Having Anything At All For Workmen Should Call Office.

The National Re-employment office in this city, of which James Shue is acting manager, has issued an appeal to the Pickaway county public to notify that office of any jobs which anyone has so that some person who is capable of doing that work and who is now registered at the unemployment office may be sent to the job.

Every effort is now being made to put unemployed persons in jobs where spring work is now to be done.

Every person who has such a job even if it will require only a few hours is urged to call the local office.

Mr. Shue's notice says: "The national re-employment office wishes to impress upon all employers such as householders, farmers, etc., that they may secure through the re-employment office, workers on all sorts of short time jobs, as spring work develops. We also wish to co-operate with all civic organizations stressing such programs as remodeling of homes, spring clean-up campaigns and greater activities."

"We have all classifications of men and women registered and stand ready and eager to refer workers to all local employers. Local employers are free to select their workers from our files and our service is free to the public."

In addition Fish named four other "radicals" in the administration and asserted that the administration harbors "a score or more of young radicals" tutored by Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard University.

The 12 named as being affiliated with the American Civil Liberties Union are:

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, and designated by Fish as head of the "brain trust."

Prof. Paul H. Douglas, NRA. Prof. Albert E. Taussig, NRA. Jerome N. Frank, counsel agricultural relief administration.

James M. Landis, member federal trade commission.

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, NRA.

Nathan R. Margold, solicitor interior department.

Robert Marshall, bureau of Indian affairs.

BULLITT, TOO?

Fish named four others who "may or may not be" affiliated with the American Civil Liberties Union: Ambassador to Russia William C. Bullitt, Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel, economist, agriculture department; Sidney Hillman, NRA advisory board, and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, (R) of Iowa, foreign trade adviser of the NRA.

"In addition," said Fish, "it is estimated that there are about a score or more of young radicals, so-called economic experts and lawyers of the Felix Frankfurter school of thought, most of whom are disciples of Karl Marx doing work for the government."

STUDY STATEMENTS

Meantime, Democratic House leaders were divided over the scope of the proposed investigation of Dr. Wirt's statements.

Licensed particularly at Dr. Wirt's statement that "brain trust" told him President Roosevelt was "only the Kerensky of this revolution," one group urged a wide inquiry.

STOCKS DROP

NEW YORK, March 27.—Heavy selling in the wake of President Roosevelt's renewed demand for a stock exchange regulation bill "with teeth in it," today sent stock prices tumbling on the New York exchange with losses in principal issues running to $5 a share. Selling at one time was so heavy the high speed ticker fell five minutes behind.

MAY BE NEEDED

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 27.—The nameless world predicted by Prof. W. A. P. Bal-four-Browne of England does not appear to be West, glamorous movie star.

"Even if women do come to dominate everything, they'll still need men around the house," said Mae with a smile.

"Maybe the professor is right—anyway, I'm glad I'm alive right now."

PLAN SERVICES

There will be evangelistic services in the United Brethren church, Wednesday night beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. T. C. Harper, will use as his subject "The Guest Chamber." Candle-light communion is scheduled Thursday night with a meditation "In Remembrance."

PLANE AND PILOT FOUND

The Pan-American Airways airplane San Jose, lost in 1932 on a flight over the Andes, was found Thursday in the Argentine mountains, four miles south of Puente Del Inca. Pilot C. J. Robinson, (above), of Chicago, whose body and those of eight fellow victims had been found. A wing tip of the liner San Jose in the photograph of the high Andes was made by the pilot. The disappearance of the great liner had been one of the mysteries of aviation.

peace of that home He loved so well. He found rest with nature in the midst of its beauty and calm. He had his disciples out of the city to the fields, to Gethsemane and the Garden; out to desert places and to the mountain top away from the crowd. What a relief to be able to escape the noise, the confusion, the discord and strife of the busy everyday life, out on the mount where there was rest.

But Christ found rest only where and when He found God. "Nature is nothing without God, when the mountain top became a place of prayer. Night with the presence of the Father the soul of Jesus was soothed and satisfied and strengthened." He found rest in prayer. In Gethsemane wet with the dew of agony He prayed and peace possessed His spirit. "Thy will be done." Peace came only when the will is surrendered to God. Satisfaction and happiness radiate from a life where the mind and will of God operate. It is in the clashing of the Divine and human wills that the soul can find no rest. Then is the sense of loneliness. "My God, why has Thou forsaken me?"

It was on the cross that ultimate peace and rest came to Jesus. A prayer for the sinner, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." A good word of hope to a penitent thief, "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." A message of love to mother and friend. A moment of terrible darkness, then, "Father into Thy hands I commend My Spirit."

"Peace! Peace! wonderful peace. Coming down from the Father above: Sweep over my spirit for-ever I pray. In fathomless billows of love."

expected that the storm would run down on this section later in the day.

WIND STRONG, TOO

A 30-mile an hour wind accompanied the rainstorm in Columbus last night.

At Mansfield, roads were glazed with ice and traffic was paralyzed. Bus and train schedules all were thrown behind time because of the storm.

William H. Alexander, United States weather observer at Columbus, predicted that the storm would soon be spent in the state and that weather would clear by tonight. While conditions were not so severe in central and southern Ohio as in the northwestern counties, heavy rains were general throughout the state.

In a number of places more than an inch of rainfall was reported during the night. Rivers began to rise. All have been so low, however, that no danger of flood was felt, Alexander said.

A drop of about 14 degrees in temperature is predicted for tonight. After the weather clears tonight, according to Alexander's forecast, conditions will be fair with slowly rising temperatures.

brace only a temporary period. After that, presumably, the air-mail legislation now pending before Congress will have been enacted and a permanent set-up established.

The commercial air mail contracts were annulled on February 9, after Postmaster General Farley charged that they had been let by the previous administration in "fraud and collusion."

The Black committee of the senate, investigating air and ocean mail contracts, had brought out that there had been a meeting of large operators with Postmaster General Brown, in the Hoover administration, in which agreement had been reached on division of territory.

SEVICE INADEQUATE

The Army Air corps then took over the job of carrying the mail under unfortunate circumstances. The worst weather of the winter was at hand, with blizzards and storms prevailing; the army pilots were unfamiliar with the routes, and in many instances the army equipment was not suited to the task. Ten were killed.

be exercised over the drastic modification of the veterans economy provisions, voted in the special session of congress as a method of bolstering the credit of the nation.

While the amount of money involved in the congressional provisions adopted over the objection of the president was not large, the chief executive was said to believe they embrace an important principle.

The difference revolved around World War veterans whose bills were declared by law to be "presumed" to arise from service during the war. These include tuberculosis and veterans suffering from nervous and mental diseases.

Under the provisions, 29,000 "presumptives" would be restored permanently to the rolls at 75 per cent of their base compensation. The economy act provided for review of all cases by special boards.

Roosevelt Meets Railroad Chiefs

National News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, March 27.—President Roosevelt tackled the labor problem today, the dispute between workers and executives of the railroads. The president heard protests of executives against his proposal that the present ten percent in wages be continued another month. Several days ago, after the managers and workers tried unsuccessfully to effect a compromise, the president offered the services of Federal Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman to mediate their negotiations. Eastman worked in vain to get the two sides together.

TO MEET CHIEFS
Today, Mr. Roosevelt agreed to see the rail labor chiefs, headed by A. F. Whitney, chairman of the association of railway labor executives. With Whitney and his fellow chiefs before him, the president will make another effort to secure labor's acceptance of his proposal for continuation of the present wage scale.

Whitney asked not only restoration of the ten percent pay cut immediately, but an additional ten percent besides. The railways agreed to the president's proposal, but further than that they will not go. Before Mr. Roosevelt addressed an appeal to the rail executives asking cooperation in a move for peace, the managers had filed notice that the ten percent cut would be increased to 15 percent July 1.

If the two factions continue to disagree their controversy will be referred to the U. S. board of mediation. The president will do everything he can to end the wage dispute today, but if he fails he will not delay his scheduled departure for Florida late today.

Lightning Rod Vindicated

WHEN lightning storms are in season most persons count lightning Public Enemy No. 1. The average person lives in deadly terror of severe electric storms.

And yet lightning is one of man's greatest benefactors. Natural lightning introduces free of charge about 100,000 tons of fixed nitrogen into the soil in the course of a year. One bolt will deposit immense quantities of this absolutely essential fertilizer in a field. So when a farmer loses some cows or a barn by lightning he will, if of a philosophical turn of mind, mark it up as balancing his account with Vulcan, the fertilizer man.

Lightning is, of course, a benefactor of the lightning rod salesman, who once made a fat living affixing iron rods to barn gables. But the lightning rod is a benefactor of the farmer so that score is also even. Lightning rods, according to an engineer for the General Electric Company, on lightning, will save a house or barn 99 out of a hundred times. They are to a frame building what its steel frame is to a skyscraper—a conductor of electricity.

Give lightning a chance to reach the ground and it will find its way there with the least possible damage. It is when its passage earthward is obstructed by inadequate conductors such as trees or a roof harring the bolt from a grounded wiring system that havoc is wrought.

Another advantage in smoking a pipe is that you needn't offer one to everybody in the group.

Slot Machines

A SCIENTIFIC study of the slot machine as a gambling device is being made in New York.

The New York police under the LaGuardia administration are engaged in a campaign to rid the city of slot machines, which rob citizens of the metropolis annually of millions of dollars. In an effort to familiarize the public with the slot machine racket, the mayor had two machines placed on exhibition in Rockefeller Center. They are being studied under the supervision of Dr. E. E. Free of New York university, to learn what the returns are to the men who play them. Slugs (without any money value) are given to all visitors and the latter are invited to "play" the slot machine. Careful note is taken of the results. One of the machines, played 5,695 times, had returned 57.2 per cent. The return from the second, played 5,835 times, was 58.3 per cent. Both machines will be played 200,000 times to test the law of averages and the law of series.

Whatever may be the results of the experiment, there still will be persons eager to take what small chance there may be of winning. The gambling instinct is not governed by reason.

Somebody should propose a bonus for the taxpayer.

Everybody can take it. Those who break are the ones who take it too seriously.

Modernism in law enforcement: $1200 a year fixed income, $25,000 a year fixed officer.

America feels a sincere desire to convert the heathen, unless they wear pants and carry automatics.

The thing that most annoys the naughty is being reformed by people who are no better than they are.

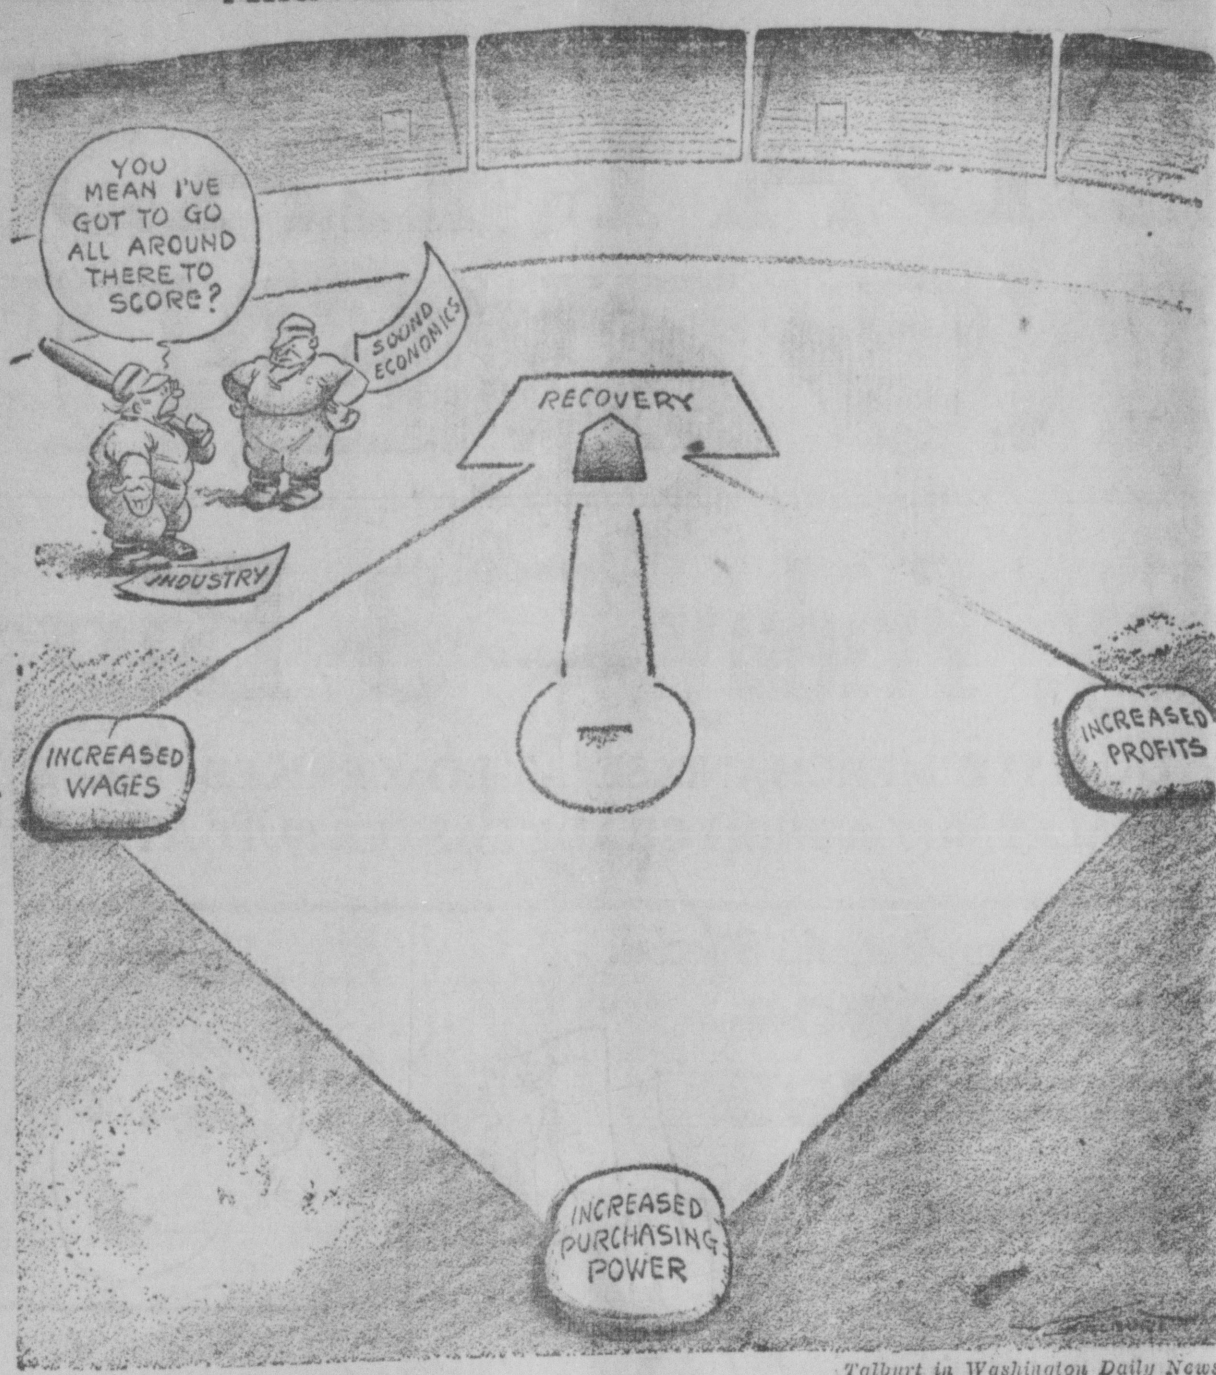

It may be coincidence, but you hear less longing for the good old days since moderns got a look at leg-of-mutton sleeves.

Now that gangland has shown what it can do with only a wooden pistol, advocates of the outlawing of all firearms will have to hunt up a new argument.

"KNAVE'S GIRL"

By JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER FORTY

It was evening now. She and Julian would be leaving soon. The group that had gathered for cocktails on the veranda was urging that they change their plans and stay.

"I had counted on bridge this evening," Mrs. Tracy was saying fretfully. "Are you determined to leave, Julian?"

"Ask Patricia," he said briefly. Mrs. Tracy turned to Patricia. She shook her head. Nothing could make her stay an unnecessary moment, nothing, not even Clark. "Must you go?" he asked pleadingly, at her elbow. "Won't morning do just as well?"

"No," she said. "Please don't urge me." "Aren't you having a good time, Patricia? You have seemed so strange today."

"I'm tired, that's all. I didn't sleep very well last night." "What a shame," broke in Marthe, letting them know that she was present. "I slept like a baby myself."

She looked reflectively at Julian. He looked at her. Deep within, Patricia felt herself begin to tremble. No one suspected. Marthe would see to that. Marthe could cheat and win. She could have Clark and Julian too. Patricia could not stop her.

She could say nothing to Clark. Her hands were tied by her own sense of fair play, her own sensibilities, her own feeling for human decency. But she could speak to Julian. On their way back to town she did.

"I went for a walk last night," she began deliberately. "I couldn't sleep so I went for a walk on the lawn."

"Oh," was Julian's only comment. When Patricia failed to amplify her bare statement he ventured to say, "Well, what about your walk on the lawn? I'm all agog."

"You know what about it," she advised him levelly.

"I'm afraid I don't."

"Very well then," said Patricia in a rush, "I didn't mean to but I saw you—you and Marthe."

She had got it out. Her heart was pounding. Her face was crimson. Julian was completely undisturbed. He smiled in quiet amusement.

"It was a nice night for a walk," he admitted casually. "Marthe and I decided that we would take one too. Why didn't you come out of the shrubbery and join us? Still," he added after thought, "still I guess it's just as well that you didn't."

His armor was perfect and bright. They had touched on the subject before, so he thought. But it wasn't the same. This wasn't the same. Patricia felt now that she was fighting for her life. She was not curious. She was not prying. She was not interfering in his affairs. It was just that she must know. The touch of her cold desperate fingers on his wrist startled Julian. Something that he saw in her face erased the smile from his lips. Poor youngster, he thought, and again, poor youngster...

"Go ahead," he said gently. "Surely you have not finished."

She gave him an earnest, penetrating look. Tears stung at her eyelids.

"I haven't any right to question you," she said, "I know that I haven't."

Another funny thing is a bald old guy with a rooster-wattle neck complaining because his wife has got fat.

Throwing a kiss in the dark seemed the most futile effort until people began to applaud the hero in a news reel.

Lives of rich men oft remind us we can make our lives too brief, and departing leave behind us wealthy widows minus grief.

"I give you the right—this once." "Are you in love with Marthe?" "Good heavens, no."

He saw in chagrin that this wasn't the answer he had hoped for. His very real sympathy lessened slightly. Still, he had promised. He prepared gracefully to yield to cross examination.

"Is she in love with you?" "That's an awkward question, my dear," He grinned. "Even I have fleeting moments of modesty."

"I know," faltered Patricia with a kind of wretched bravery, "that Marthe was in the house that time when I started my burglar hunt. I remembered when I heard her laugh last night."

"My word, you are a detective," he said sharply, growing irritated despite his best intentions. "I think we'd better hire you out to Holmes. Heaven knows that Marthe isn't any saint. Still I can't think of any particular reason why I should deliver her piecemeal to you."

"She was asking about me last night," put in Patricia, suddenly defiant. "I heard her ask if I were really your niece."

"What of it? I thought you had certain standards of your own, Patricia. I protected you from her last night and now I find today that I must protect her from you. Women," announced Julian Haverholt distinctly, "women make me sick."

The girl dropped her head in shame. Always she thought of herself as superior to Marthe March only to be brought back again and again to the fact that she was not. Marthe was cheating, was deceiving Clark. Well, she herself was cheating too. It had taken Julian Haverholt to make her see it. How many women, Patricia wondered, liked in after years to remember the meannesses, the subtleties of courtship days?

They drove on in silence. Julian was annoyed. He made no attempt to conceal his disappointment in the girl. Half his irritation was based on his own wounded pride but he did not realize it and hence could be cold to Patricia's suffering.

"I know I seemed horrible," faltered the girl, after a long time. Julian did not deny it. "You—you didn't understand," she muttered.

"I understood all too well," he informed her curtly. "You're transparent as a pane of glass. You're wondering just where Clark fits in."

"And if I am?"

"I would suggest that he fits in as Marthe's fiancé. It's a role that suits him to a T."

"Do you really believe that Marthe is playing fair?"

"What's the difference, if she can get away with it? I rather think," said Haverholt deliberately, "that Marthe can. Marthe is very clever and Clark, for all his virtues, is a wee bit stupid."

"Clark isn't stupid."

"I assure you, my darling, that he is."

Julian fuffed unexpectedly. Patricia clenched her fists, bit back a flood of angry words. She looked away from Julian at the spinning country-side through a haze of helpless tears. That was the worst of it, she was helpless. Everything was all wrong. It was not right that Julian should be able to laugh at Clark in just this way. Marthe was to blame. But, Marthe would never be brought to book. As Julian had so aptly said Marthe was clever. Patricia gave her that.

LIVE TODAY

Earth's wisest souls have lived the most
In hours they called "Today."
Compared seldom with the ghost
Which men call "Yesterday."
With men of the Eternal Now
They toiled and laughed and played;
Each present hour but showed them how
A richer life is made;
They lived today forgetting all
Defeats or things that might befall.

For all the Past is but the road
We traveled yesterday;
We should not bear today the load
Which on our shoulders lay
A day, a month, a year ago,
Nor should we try to bear the weight
The Future claims to know;
Today calls us to hesitate
Until it dons the robe of Past
And we have done the present task.

All the world loves a lover, and all the world adores a fighter. These are two reasons why all the world will love RKO-Radio Pictures' "Morning Glory," coming to the Cliftona Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

There are other reasons: The star-studded cast headed by dynamic Katharine Hepburn, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Adolphe Menjou. The sparkling direction by that master storyteller, Lowell Sherman. And the play by brilliant Zoe Akins.

"Morning Glory" is the story of a fighter, and a dramatic romance with New York's colorful Broadway as its background.

It presents Miss Hepburn, the screen's most interesting personality, as a girl who believes in herself, who knows she has the talents to become a great actress. In stirring fashion, it depicts her courageous fight to win recognition, with its disappointments, its heartbreaks, and its final triumph.

Exercise Is Good for Baby, Too

Should Have at Least Half Hour of Free
"Kicking" Each Day

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

EXERCISE is not only beneficial but essential to the welfare of the human body. The value of systematic and properly supervised exercise cannot be overstated. Classes in school and other groups devoted to gymnastics have been greatly aided in the development of proper physique, posture and healthy bodies. School children are fortunate in having the privileges of directed exercise.

Despite the generally accepted view, I fear too little attention is given to the importance of exercise for the infant. Every infant should have at least a half hour of exercise each day. If this simple health rule were enforced, I am confident fewer infants would suffer from constipation, "sniffles," colds and other minor ailments.

Kick, Stretch and Roll
I do not mean to imply that the babies should be taught such exercises as the older child takes. But they can be encouraged in certain free movements that promote the growth and development of the body.

Spread a clean sheet on the floor of a warm and sunny room. Undress the child and turn him loose on the sheet or in a padded play pen. Make sure the room is really warm and free from drafts. Let the child kick, stretch and roll around to his heart's content.

Of course, the infant obtains a great deal of exercise in his daily bath. Every healthy baby manages to squirm and wriggle around in the water to his own great joy and often to the anxiety of the mother. Never discourage this helpful performance.

Avoid excessive clothing. Too many dresses, shawls and blankets are cumbersome and a hindrance to baby's natural desire for activity and exercise.

Crying Is Beneficial
Many will agree that a play pen or play yard for the young infant relieves the mother in many ways, as well as aiding in the development of the child. At six months, the baby can be placed in the play yard every day. He will soon learn to sit, crawl and eventually to stand and walk.

Here he gives his arms, body and legs the necessary exercise and at the same time mother is permitted to attend to other household duties. Most play yards have a padded bottom and are slightly elevated from the floor. When placed here, the baby can neither do damage or harm himself.

When baby cries do not pick him up and—pet him. It is a natural temptation to do this, but bear in mind that crying is really beneficial. It causes baby to expand his chest. Of course, excessive crying is another thing. It may be a sign of some physical disorder and warrants investigation.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

ANON WAR MEMORIAL

Under "Fifteen Years Ago" you recite that Pickaway-co was honored by the unveiling of a bronze tablet for overhauling the War Savings stamp quota.

Did Pickaway-co send anything else to war besides money for bonds and war saving stamps? If so there is nothing in the county seat to show it. Even little Five Points has erected a small monument honoring and commemorating its World War veterans.

Seven or eight years ago, a suggestion that steps be taken looking to the erection of a suitable monument for the World War veterans was made to the Rotary club but it was passed up without even a second.

If Circleville cannot even give the boys a tablet I would suggest you not bring the War Saving stamp tablet to light again.

NOAH G. SPANGLER.

Early Dope for Sportsmen

Only two copies are known of a book printed in old French at Lyons about the year 1540 by a Jacques Moderne that is able to give one no less than 27 "new and approved" receipts for the catching of fish, ducks and birds, with the hands, rods, nets, bait, etc.

THANK YOU, CRISCO!

You'll find that Crisco-fried foods and Crisco pies are wholesome—they digest quickly. That's because Crisco is a creamy, light vegetable fat. It digests quickly itself!

Foods cooked with Crisco don't overtax the stomach. Even the appearance of Crisco foods tells you so. Crisco foods, properly fried, aren't soggy—they're so crispy that they look "dry-fried!" And Crisco pastry doesn't bake up greasy-soaked and brown—it comes out of the oven flaky and golden.

Crisco is made by Crisco's own secret process from pure vegetable oils. Crisco is made to keep fresh, sweet, and creamy. Don't bother to put it in the ice-box. Crisco keeps "quick-digesting" for weeks and months, you know!

Warpath

Missouri's Democratic House delegation is after the scalp of scrappy Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Mitchell is also a Missourian and a Democrat, but they don't like him just the same. And from their point of view there is good reason. The forthright Mitchell not only heartily disapproves of them, but just now is telling the folks back home all about it.

Much to the delight of the state, No. 1 boss of west Missouri politics is Kansas City's Thomas Jefferson Pendergast. No. 2 boss is Representative Joseph B. Shannon, also of Kansas City. This year they are out to capture the City Council.

Mitchell disapproves this boss rule. Sitting in his Commerce Building office he has been waging a furious crusade against it, bombarding Shannon and Pendergast with rip-roaring blasts and statements. One of his latest was a scolding of Shannon, who he charged with neglecting his congressional duties to play local politics. The shot hit the bull's eye so squarely that Shannon rushed home to patch up his fences.

Result: The enraged Missouri delegation is demanding that Roosevelt dismiss Mitchell.

Note: This same delegation once endorsed Mitchell for appointment as Ambassador to Belgium. They thought they would get rid of him by having him sent out of the country.

With American designers more to the fore than ever, the new Spring styles show a remarkable reversion to femininity. Gone is the mannish note that predominated in the styles of the past few years. Here are a few of the creations seen at a recent preview. At left, Sylvia Sidney, film star, wears an evening gown of crinkly crepe, embroidered with a flower design in red and yellow. With it she wears a shirred jacket in red velvet. Top center, Norma Shearer displays another velvet evening jacket in cadet blue with high petal collar. Lower, an orange-blossom design in a Spring dress of gay print, and at right, the last word in bathing attire. ## 57,000 Children Sign Pledges in Governor's Campaign for Safety

Grand total of 56,916 Ohio school children from primary to highway school grades inclusive have signed safety pledges committing themselves to be cautious and careful in using roads and streets of the state and community and to assist in the Governor's state-wide program to reduce accidents and to preserve human life. Highway Director O. W. Merrell informed Gov. White today.

Cooperating with school superintendents, principals and teachers, the highway department's safety program, in conjunction with Governor White's recommendation that traffic safety be made a matter of "public consciousness" has been carried to the school groups.

Governor White a short time ago asked the highway department to use all facilities at its disposal in the service of the statewide safety program pursuant to the heavy death toll and automobile clubs, service clubs and similar agencies has been given to Governor White's safety program. Many school authorities have commended the program as being one of the prime methods of inculcating the "consciousness of the value of human life and the importance of reducing accidents on the streets and highways through continuous education of the growing child."

The safety pledge of the children have been communicated to the Governor by individual children and in groups. In some instances entire classes and schools are recorded on the pledge.

COIFFURE STYLES

No more enchanting feminine coiffures were displayed in public style show of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' Association in Chicago Wednesday than the coiffures "Fantastique" worn by Catherine Weary (left) and the "Cocktail" hairdress worn by Kay Griffin. The riot of small curls and the chic flower tucked in among them won wide approval. Its advantage, according to the young women who modeled it, is the ease with which it can be cared for.

WRECK TABULATION SHOWS COMPARISON IN 2 MONTHS' TIME

Accidents on curves, at intersections and on grades showed increases on the state highway system for February over January, according to a tabulation by the State Highway Department of traffic mishaps occurring on state highways outside municipalities during these two months.

In February there were 164 accidents on curves against 84 in January, 84 at intersections in February against 46 in January, and 63 on grades in February against 27 in January.

On the other hand, accidents involving pedestrians showed approximately 30 per cent decrease in comparative figures for the two months. In January there were 31 such accidents as compared with 22 in February.

Ice and snow created hazards particularly dangerous to traffic during February. Of the 165 mishaps chargeable to skidding during this month, 151 were due to ice and snow.

Accident tabulated by the highway department revealed only one more person killed in February than in January—37 against 36. However, there were 55 more persons injured—425 against 370.

She Buys Her Biggest Bargain Without Leaving The House!

REAL bargains bring women shopping in good weather or bad. It is one of the chief American pastimes to surge through a milling crowd in order to save 10, 20 or even 33 percent. Cooking with gas saves 70 percent compared to the cost of the next least expensive method of cooking. Yet, you shop but once for gas, and that is when the service is installed in your home. Each time you use the gas range you buy this bargain in cooking fuel, and it is not paid for until after it is used.

The use of natural gas for general household purposes saves the customer more than he pays for it. That is why we say, "Gas Doesn't Cost... It PAYS!" It would continue to pay the customer a handsome profit under a more adequate rate which would allow The Gas Company a small compensation for its service.

Mrs. Roosevelt Assailed in Her Effort to Protect Consumers

WASHINGTON—The consumer—chief forger of the man of the Administration—gradually is coming into his own. Alarmed at rising prices and the protest of housewives, officials are now giving greater consideration to consumer protection.

But it was an uphill fight. Industry, the big food distributors, all were against the consumer. And so powerful was their influence that many Administration officials bowed before them.

Not even Mrs. Roosevelt, first Housewife of the Land, carried weight with certain parts of her husband's Administration. For instance, Mrs. Roosevelt, at one of her press conferences made the following statement regarding consumers' protection:

"I think all goods sold to the public should be labeled as to their grades and quality. Without this the consumer cannot know what he is buying. This is the only way the consumer can intelligently have a hold on the market. I mean authentic grades and standards."

But when the Consumers' Council of the AAA picked this up for republication in its bulletin, higher officials in the AAA objected. They insisted on censoring the President's wife. So not until today was her statement published.

Broke

White-haired Chairman Jesse Jones has a sympathetic understanding these days when business men come to the RFC with the old plea: "We've plenty of assets, but we need cash."

With Mrs. Jones, he attended a bridge party. Mrs. Jones is an expert, but Chairman Jesse hadn't played for more than a year. His cards were terrible. At the end of the evening he owed $2.

He fumbled through his pockets, fumbled harder, turned pink, then crimson. Chairman Jesse may have millions for Uncle Sam every day; he may have one of the largest fortunes in public life, but he also has that human male failing of forgetting to transfer his wallet when changing his pants.

"I... I'm sorry," he stammered. "I'm afraid Mrs. Jones will have to bail me out."

And Mrs. Jones, with a diabolical grin, paid the $2.

Real Test

Neither the soldier bonus vote in the House nor the Senate rejection of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty was a real test of Presidential strength on Capitol Hill.

Neither questions in any way involved the President's Recovery Program, and neither was of his making. The House, being what it is, always goes pro-bonus in election years. The St. Lawrence was the work of President Hoover, and he failed twice even to bring it to a vote.

But two issues which really will test Roosevelt's hold on Congress are the Dies silver reauthorization bill and the revolutionary tariff-making reform measure. The first, making reform measure, the first, Roosevelt opposes as being directly counter to his monetary program. The second he is sponsoring.

The tariff bill will be passed, although in not quite as sweeping form as originally proposed by the President. The House Ways and Means committee already has modified it slightly, and before the House as a whole plus the Senate get through with it, it will be still further limited. But the essentials of the bill, giving the President tariff-making powers in the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements, will remain, and the bill will become law.

The outcome on the silver bill rest with the Republicans in the Senate. If they play politics—cast aside legislation and vote for it solely to embarrass the Administration—then the chances are strong the measure will get Senate approval, although in amended form.

It will then be up to the President either to vote or accept the bill.

Strong Wind Accompanies Snow and Sleet

a cold rain which turned to sleet, encasing the north central section in a sheath of ice, disrupting power and communication systems and badly snarling traffic.

PHONE LINES DOWN

Several sections, such as Kenton, were virtually isolated from outside communication as the ice-strained power and telephone lines cracked and fell.

Practically all rural lines in northwestern Ohio were down. Fremont, Fostoria, Findlay, Lorain and Toledo areas were among the sections hardest hit.

At Toledo, snow was piled from three to five inches.

Thousands of dollars damage was done by the storm in the vicinity of Napoleon where the hail, rain and sleet tore down trees and high tension and electrical wire. Business was badly crippled.

Extensive damage was feared for fruit crops in the northern sections as a result of the storm.

Temperatures in Columbus, which was bathed with a drizzling rain throughout the night, began falling this morning and it was

By REV. T. C. HARPER
Luke 21:37—"And in the day time He was teaching in the temple; and at night He went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives."

In this verse we find the key to the most remarkable life ever lived. Jesus' entire ministry was an active one. It was a ministry that made constant demands upon His energy. That last week was an unusually busy, strenuous, exacting one. From the hour of His triumphal entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday to another day when He staggered through one of its gates beneath the weight of a heavy wooden cross He was under continuous strain. There could be

The service of the radio broadcasting station of the state highway patrol has been offered to Pickaway-co through the office of Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

A communication received today by Sheriff Radcliff from Lynn Black, superintendent of the highway patrol, asked co-operation and also promised co-operation. Black's letter said:

"The state highway patrol has now under construction a radio broadcasting station at Columbus which is designed as the Central Station of an eventual state-wide radio network.

"The Buckeye Sheriffs Association Station WPGG at Findlay, now in operation, will work in conjunction with this station immediately it is ready for operation. The Association has already installed approximately 57 station receivers and 23 car receivers in various departments in the northwestern portion of the state. In addition each of the Highway Patrol Stations and cars are being equipped with receivers as rapidly as possible.

"We are offering the services of this station to all police departments and sheriffs offices in Ohio, and hope that you will find this service of value to your department. The Federal Radio Commission has assigned a frequency of 1682 k. c., and we expect eventually to have a group of stations on this frequency sufficient to cover the entire state. The tests recently made show us that excellent reception can be had at all times with station receivers at a radius of 80 or 90 miles from these two stations, and a conservative radius of 55 miles for automobile receivers.

DETAILS MISSING

Congress to Enact New Laws for Air Mail

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The administration took the first step toward returning the air mail service to private operation today by issuing a call for new bids immediately.

The new bids will be asked on a temporary basis, pending the enactment by Congress of the new and permanent air mail legislation.

Announcement that air mail bids would be asked of commercial companies immediately was made by the president in his semi-weekly press conference today.

The news was given out in the form of a simple oral statement by the president that at 2:30 today he would go over the new post office proposal for asking bids on air mail from commercial companies.

REFUSES TO EXPLAIN
The president was immediately flooded with questions as to how he would ask for such bids pending legislation, and whether old companies whose contracts were rescinded in the general cancellation order some time ago could bid under the new plan.

To these questions the president replied that he could not go into details.

The only detail revealed today was that the new set-up will em-

Members of the local Kiwanis club, guests and visitors from the Columbus Northwest, Delaware, and Chillicothe clubs enjoyed a splendid meeting at Hanley's restaurant, Monday evening, when Jules Brazil, member of the New York staff of the National Broadcasting Co., was the featured entertainer.

The local club received the Fellowship chest, a project of the district Kiwanis organization, from the Northwest club. The Circleville club will in turn carry the chest to Portsmouth next Wednesday evening. The club having the highest percentage of attendance at its home and out-of-town meetings receives recognition at the close of the club year.

The chest was presented to E. I. Gephart, acting as toastmaster, by Dr. Woodward, president of the Columbus club.

STRESSES FUTURE
The meeting also was honored by the presence of Ben Arneson, Delaware, lieutenant governor of the Kiwanis district, who counted the evening as his official visit to the club. In a short talk he urged Kiwanians to build for the future by supporting improvements in our social and home life in order to eliminate the under-privileged children problem.

Mr. Brazil proved the highlight of the evening. Prior to the meeting he met a number of the Kiwanians and guests and there were many others whom he did not meet but who were pointed out to him. During his part of the program he called nearly all the visitors by name and occupation in "cracking" jokes about them. His rendition of songs, especially those presented in years gone by by the famous Harry Lauder, was a feature of his program.

Sixty-five persons including J. Erie Nutt and Alvin Jones, president and past president of the Chillicothe club, attended the meeting. Stuart Spangler, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Spangler, also attended the meeting. He is secretary of the Northwest Columbus club.

U. S. EMPLOYMENT OFFICE SEEKS JOBS

Any Person Having Anything At All For Workmen Should Call Office.

The National Re-employment office in this city, of which James Shea is acting manager, has issued an appeal to the Pickaway county public to notify that office of any jobs which anyone has so that some person who is capable of doing that work and who is now registered at the unemployment office may be sent to the job.

Every effort is now being made to put unemployed persons in jobs where spring work is now to be done.

Every person who has such a job even if it will require only a few hours is urged to call the local office.

Mr. Shea's notice says: "The national re-employment office wishes to impress upon all employers such as householders, farmers, etc., that they may secure through the re-employment office, workers on all sorts of short time jobs, as spring work develops. We also wish to co-operate with all civic organizations stressing such programs as remodeling of homes, spring cleaning campaigns and greater activities."

"We have all classifications of men and women registered and stand ready and eager to refer workers to all local employers. Local employers are free to select their workers from our files and our service is free to the public."

SOLON NAMES

have been misled as to the purposes of the organization," said Fish.

In addition Fish named four other "radicals" in the administration and asserted that the administration harbors "a score or more of young radicals" tutored by Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard University.

The 12 named as being affiliated with the American Civil Liberties Union are:

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, and designated by Fish as head of the "brain trust."

Prof. Paul H. Douglas, NRA. Prof. Albert E. Taussig, NRA. Jerome N. Frank, counsel agricultural relief administration.

James M. Landis, member federal trade commission. Dr. Frederic C. Howe, NRA.

Dr. Clarence Darrow, noted lawyer and head of NRA review committee.

Henry T. Hunt, counsel, PWA. Nathan R. Margold, solicitor interior department.

Robert Marshall, bureau of Indian affairs.

William E. Dodd, ambassador to Germany.

Rose Schneiderman, NRA labor advisory board.

BULLITT, TOO?

Fish named four others who "may or may not be" affiliated with the American Civil Liberties Union: Ambassador to Russia William C. Bullitt, Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel, economist, agriculture department; Sidney Hillman, NRA advisory board, and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart (R) of Iowa, foreign trade adviser of the NRA.

"In addition," said Fish, "it is estimated that there are about a score or more of young radicals, so-called economic experts and lawyers of the Felix Frankfurter school of thought, most of whom are disciples of Karl Marx doing work for the government."

STUDY STATEMENTS

Meantime, Democratic House leaders were divided over the scope of the proposed investigation of Dr. Wirt's statements.

Licensed particularly at Dr. Wirt's statement that "brain trust" told him President Roosevelt was "only the Keresky of this revolution," one group urged a wide inquiry.

CHATTERTON, BRENT ROMANCE IS ENDED

NEW YORK, March 27.—Ruth Chatterton, termed the "first lady of the screen," today confirmed the arrangement for an "amicable separation" from her actor husband, George Brent, and emphatically denied she planned to re-marry her first husband, Ralph Forbes.

STOCKS DROP

NEW YORK, March 27.—Heavy selling in the wake of President Roosevelt's renewed demand for a stock exchange regulation bill "with teeth in it," today sent stock prices tumbling on the New York exchange with losses in principal issues running to $5 a share.

Selling at one time was so heavy the high speed ticker fell five minutes behind.

MAY BE NEEDED

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 27.—The manless world predicted by Prof. W. A. P. Bal-four-Brown of England does not appear to Mac West, glamorous movie star.

"Even if women do come to dominate everything, they'll still need men around the house," said Mac with a smile.

peace of that home He loved so well. He found rest with nature in the midst of its beauty and calm. He led his disciples out of the city to the fields, to Gethsemane and the Garden; out to desolate places and to the mountain away from the crowd. What a relief to be able to escape the noise, the confusion, the discord and strife of the busy everyday life, out on the mount where there was rest.

But Christ found rest only where and when He found God. "Nature is, nothing without God, when the mountain top became a place of prayer. Night with the presence of the Father the soul of Jesus was soothed and satisfied and strengthened." He found rest in prayer. In Gethsemane wet with the dew of agony He prayed and peace possessed His spirit. "Thy will be done." Peace came only when the will is surrendered to God. Satisfaction and happiness radiate from a life where the mind and will of God operate. It is in the clashing of the Divine and human wills that the soul can find no rest. Then the sense of loneliness, "My God, why has Thou forsaken me?"

It was on the cross that ultimate peace and rest came to Jesus. A prayer for the sinner, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." A good word of hope to a penitent thief, "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." A message of love to mother and friend. A moment of terrible darkness, then, "Father into Thy hands I commend My Spirit."

"Peace! Peace! wonderful peace. Coming down from the Father above: Sweep over my spirit for ever I pray. In fathomless billows of love."

expected that the storm would run down on this section later in the day.

WIND STRONG, TOO

A 30-mile an hour wind accompanied the rainstorm in Columbus last night.

At Mansfield, roads were glazed with ice and traffic was paralyzed. Bus and train schedules all were thrown behind time because of the storm.

William H. Alexander, United States weather observer at Columbus, predicted that the storm would soon be spent in the state and that weather would clear by tonight. While conditions were not so severe in central and southern Ohio as in the northwestern counties, heavy rains were general throughout the state.

In a number of places more than an inch of rainfall was reported during the night. Rivers began to rise. All have been so low, however, that no danger of flood was felt, Alexander said.

A drop of about 14 degrees in temperature is predicted for tonight. After the weather clears tonight, according to Alexander's forecast, conditions will be fair with slowly rising temperatures.

brace only a temporary period. After that, presumably, the air-mail legislation now pending before Congress will have been established.

The commercial air mail contracts were annulled on February 9, after Postmaster General Farley charged that they had been let by the previous administration in "fraud and collusion."

The Black committee of the senate investigating air and ocean mail contracts, had brought out that there had been a meeting of large operators with Postmaster General Brown, in the Hoover administration, in which agreement had been reached on division of territory.

SERVICE INADEQUATE

The Army Air corps then took over the job of carrying the mail under unfortunate circumstances. The worst weather of the winter was at hand, with blizzards and storms prevailing; the army pilots were unfamiliar with the routes, and in many instances the army equipment was not suited to the task. Ten were killed.

Roosevelt Meets Railroad Chiefs

National News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 27.—President Roosevelt tackled another labor problem today, the dispute between workers and executives of the railroads. The president heard protests of executives against his proposal that the present ten percent in wages be continued another month.

Several days ago, after the managers and workers tried unsuccessfully to effect a compromise, the president offered the services of Federal Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman to mediate their negotiations. Eastman worked in vain to get the two sides together.

TO MEET CHIEFS

Today, Mr. Roosevelt agreed to see the rail labor chiefs, headed by A. F. Whitney, chairman of the association of railway labor executives. With Whitney and his fellow chieftains before him, the president will make another effort to secure labor's acceptance of his proposal for continuation of the present wage scale.

Whitney asked not only restoration of the ten percent pay cut immediately, but an additional ten percent besides. The railroads agreed to the president's proposal, but further than that they will not go. Before Mr. Roosevelt addressed an appeal to the rail executives asking cooperation in a move for peace, the managers had filed notice that the ten percent cut would be increased to 15 percent July 1.

If the two factions continue to disagree their controversy will be referred to the U. S. board of mediation. The president will do everything he can to end the wage dispute today, but if he fails, he will not delay his scheduled departure for Florida late today.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THEY say the dude ranch business is getting to be a right profitable business, and lots of business men are going into it. They good care of the folks that go to these ranches, and if a fellow know about ranch life, they let him right gently. At a few years ago, before they got much business efficiency into there used to be rough guys king on some of these ranches. I used to like to see a city guy throwed out of a horse. Course, wasn't good for business, and I didn't done any more.

here was one city guy with a dough went out to a dude ranch, and one of the cowboys right around a horse for him. The guy was all dressed up in swell ag togs, and he had a swell pair of pants on, but he said to the cowboy, "Just when it was time for him to get into the saddle, 'Say, I feel like a horse before?'"

"Oh, that's all right, mister," says the cowboy. "You ain't got no dough on this here pony. He feels like a horse before. He ain't never rode before. So the two of you learn together."

Lightning Rod Vindicated

WHEN lightning storms are in season most persons count lightning Public Enemy N. 1. The average person lives in deadly terror of severe electric storms.

And yet lightning is one of man's greatest benefactors. Natural lightning introduces free of charge about 100,000 tons of fixed nitrogen into the soil in the course of a year. One bolt will deposit immense quantities of this absolutely essential fertilizer in a field. So when a farmer loses some cows or a barn by lightning he will, if of a philosophical turn of mind, mark it up as balancing his account with Vulcan, the fertilizer man.

Lightning is, of course, a benefactor of the lightning rod salesman, who once made a fat living affixing iron rods to barn gables. But the lightning rod is a benefactor of the farmer so that score is also even. Lightning rods, according to an engineer for the General Electric Company, on lightning rods save a house or barn 99 out of a hundred times. They are a frame building what its steel frame is to a skyscraper—a conductor of electricity.

Give lightning a chance to reach the ground and it will find its way there with the least possible damage. It is when its passage earthward is obstructed by inadequate conductors such as trees or a roof wiring system that havoc is wrought.

Another advantage in smoking a pipe is that you needn't offer one to everybody in the group.

Slot Machines

A SCIENTIFIC study of the slot machine as a gambling device is being made in New York.

The New York police under the LaGuardia administration are engaged in a campaign to rid the city of slot machines, which rob citizens of the metropolis annually of millions of dollars. In an effort to familiarize the public with the slot machine racket, the mayor had two machines placed on exhibition in Rockefeller Center. They are being studied under the supervision of Dr. E. E. Free of New York university, to learn what the returns are to the men who play them. Slugs (without any money value) are given to all visitors and the latter are invited to "play" the slot machine. Careful note is taken of the results. One of the machines, played 5,695 times, had returned 57.2 per cent. The return from the second, played 5,835 times, was 58.3 per cent. Both machines will be played 200,000 times to test the law of averages and the law of series.

Whatever may be the results of the experiment, there still will be persons eager to take what small chance there may be of winning. The gambling instinct is not governed by reason.

Somebody should propose a bonus for the taxpayer.

Everybody can take it. Those who break are the ones who take it too seriously.

Modernism in law enforcement: $1200 a year fixed income, $25,000 a year fixed officer.

America feels a sincere desire to convert the heathen, unless they wear pants and carry automatics.

The thing that most annoys the naughty is being reformed by people who are no better than they are.

It may be coincidence, but you hear less longing for the good old days since moderns got a look at leg-of-mutton sleeves.

Now that gangland has shown what it can do with only a wooden pistol, advocates of the outlawing of all firearms will have to hunt up a new argument.

And There Isn't Any Short Cut!

"KNAVE'S GIRL"

By JOAN CLAYTON
COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER FORTY

It was evening now. She and Julian would be leaving soon. The group that had gathered for cocktails on the verandah was urging that they change their plans and stay.

"I had counted on bridge this evening," Mrs. Tracy was saying fretfully. "Are you determined to leave, Julian?"

"Ask Patricia," he said briefly. Mrs. Tracy turned to Patricia. She shook her head. Nothing could make her stay an unnecessary moment, nothing, not even Clark.

"Must you go?" he asked pleadingly, at her elbow. "Won't morning do just as well?"

"No," she said. "Please don't urge me."

"Aren't you having a good time, Patricia? You have seemed so strange today."

"I'm tired, that's all. I didn't sleep very well last night."

"What a shame," broke in Marthe, letting them know that she was present. "I slept like a baby myself."

She looked reflectively at Julian. He looked at her. Deep within, Patricia felt herself begin to tremble. No one suspected. Marthe would see to that. Marthe could cheat and win. She could have Clark and Julian too. Patricia could not stop her.

She could say nothing to Clark. Her hands were tied by her own sense of fair play, her own sensibilities, her own feeling for human decency. But she could speak to Julian. On their way back to town she did.

"I went for a walk last night," she began deliberately. "I couldn't sleep so I went for a walk on the lawn."

"Oh," was Julian's only comment. When Patricia failed to amplify her bare statement he ventured to say, "Well, what about your walk on the lawn? I'm all agog."

"You know what about it," she advised him levelly.

"I'm afraid that I don't."

"Very well then," said Patricia in a rush. "I didn't mean to but I saw you—you and Marthe."

She had got it out. Her heart was pounding. Her face was crimson. Julian was completely undisturbed. He smiled in quiet amusement.

"It was a nice night for a walk," he admitted casually. "Marthe and I decided that we would take one too. Why didn't you come out of the shrubbery and join us? Still," he added after thought, "still I guess it's just as well that you didn't."

His armor was perfect and bright. They had touched on the subject before, so he thought. But it wasn't the same. This wasn't the same. Patricia felt now that she was fighting for her life. She was not curious. She was not prying. She was just that she must know. The touch of her cold desperate fingers on his wrist startled Julian. Something that he saw in her face erased the smile from his lips. Poor youngster, he thought, and again, poor youngster.

"Go ahead," he said gently. "Surely you have not finished."

She gave him an earnest, penetrating look. Tears stung at her eyelids.

"I haven't any right to question you," she said, "I know that I haven't."

Another funny thing is a bald old guy with a rooster-wattle neck complaining because his wife has got fat.

Throwing a kiss in the dark seemed the most futile effort until people began to applaud the hero in a news reel.

Lives of rich men oft remind us we can make our lives too brief, and departing leave behind us wealthy widows minus grief.

"I give you the right—this once." "Are you in love with Marthe?" "Good heavens, no."

He saw in chagrin that this wasn't the answer she had hoped for. His very real sympathy lessened slightly. Still, he had promised. He prepared gracefully to yield to cross examination.

"Is she in love with you?" "That's an awkward question, my dear." He grinned. "Even I have fleeting moments of modesty."

"I know," faltered Patricia with a kind of wretched bravery, "that Marthe was in the house that time when I started my burglar hunt. I remembered when I heard her laugh last night."

"My word, you are a detective," he said sharply, growing irritated despite his best intentions. "I think we'd better hire you out to Holmes. Heaven knows that Marthe isn't any saint. Still I can't think of any particular reason why I should deliver her piecemeal to you."

"She was asking about me last night," put in Patricia, suddenly defiant. "I heard her ask if I were really your niece."

"What of it? I thought you had certain standards of your own, Patricia. I protected you from her last night and now I find today that I must protect her from you. Women," announced Julian Haverholt distinctly, "women make me sick."

The girl dropped her head in shame. Always she thought of herself as superior to Marthe March only to be brought back again and again to the fact that she was not. Marthe was cheating, was deceiving Clark. Well, she herself was cheating too. It had taken Julian Haverholt to make her see it. How many women, Patricia wondered, liked in after years to remember the meanness, the subtleties of courtship days?

They drove on in silence. Julian was annoyed. He made no attempt to conceal his disappointment in the girl. Half his irritation was based on his own wounded pride but he did not realize it and hence could be cold to Patricia's suffering.

"I know I seemed horrible," faltered the girl, after a long time. Julian did not deny it. "You—you didn't understand," she muttered.

"I understood all too well," he informed her curtly. "You're repugnant as a pane of glass. You're wondering just where Clark fits in."

"And if I am?"

"I would suggest that he fits in as Marthe's fiancé. It's a role that suits him to a 'T'."

"Do you really believe that Marthe is playing fair?"

"What's the difference, if she can get away with it? I rather think," said Haverholt deliberately, "that Marthe can. Marthe is very clever and Clark, for all his virtues, is a wee bit stupid."

"Clark isn't stupid."

"I assure you, my darling, that he is."

Julian guffawed unexpectedly. Patricia clenched her fists, bit back a flood of angry words. She looked away from Julian at the spinning country-side through a haze of helpless tears. That was the worst of it, she was helpless. Everything was all wrong. It was not right that Julian should be able to laugh at Clark in just this way. Marthe was to blame. But, Marthe would never be brought to book. As Julian had so aptly said Marthe was clever. Patricia gave her that.

LIVE TODAY

Earth's wisest souls have lived the most in hours they called "Today." Comparison seldom with the ghost Which men call "Yesterday." With men of the Eternal Now They toiled and laughed and played; Each present hour but showed them how A richer life is made; They lived Today forgetting all Defeats or things that might befall.

For all the Past is but the road We traveled yesterday; We should not bear today the load Which on our shoulders lay A day, a month, a year ago, Nor should we try to bear the weight The Future claims to know; Today calls us to hesitate Until it dons the robe of Past And we have done the present task.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

It is with a thrill that can't be described that the management of this theatre announces the coming of the exotic and mysterious "Bombay Mail," a Universal mystery story, to this theatre on Wednesday.

The screenplay, adapted from the book of the same name by L. G. Blochman, is based on the trip of the "Bombay Mail," a fast express train, from Calcutta to Bombay.

The governor is murdered! So is the maharajah! And Inspector Dyke, in the person of Edmund Lowe, steps in to investigate!

AT THE CLIFTONA

All the world loves a lover, and all the world adores a fighter. These are two reasons why all the world will love "BKO-Ready, Plz-ures" "Morning Glory," coming to the Cliftona Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

There are other reasons: The star studded cast headed by dynamic Katharine Hepburn, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Adolphe Menjou. The sparkling direction by that master megaphonist, Lowell Sherman. And the play by brilliant Zoe Akins.

"Morning Glory" is the story of a fighter, and a dramatic romance with New York's colorful Broadway as its background.

It presents Miss Hepburn, the screen's most interesting personality, as a girl who believes in herself, who knows she has the talents to become a great actress. In stirring fashion, it depicts her courageous fight to win recognition, with its disappointments, its heartbreaks, and its final triumph.

Indian Students Meet

Exercise Is Good for Baby, Too

Should Have at Least Half Hour of Free "Kicking" Each Day

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

EXERCISE is not only beneficial but essential to the welfare of the human body. The value of systematic and properly supervised exercise cannot be overstated. Classes in school and other groups devoted to gymnastics have been greatly aided in the development of proper physique, posture and healthy bodies. School children are fortunate in having the privileges of directed exercise.

Despite the generally accepted view, I fear too little attention is given to the importance of exercise for the infant. Every infant should have at least a half hour of exercise each day. If this simple health rule were enforced, I am confident fewer infants would suffer from constipation, "sniffles," colds and other minor ailments.

Kick, Stretch and Roll

I do not mean to imply that the babies should be taught such exercises as the older child takes. But they can be encouraged in certain free movements that promote the growth and development of the body.

Spread a clean sheet on the floor of a warm and sunny room. Undress the child and turn him loose on the sheet or in a padded play pen. Make sure the room is really warm and free from drafts. Let the child kick, stretch and roll around to his heart's content.

Of course, the infant obtains a great deal of exercise in his daily bath. Every healthy baby manages to squirm and wriggle around in the water to his own great joy and often to the anxiety of the mother. Never discourage this helpful performance.

Avoid excessive clothing. Too many dresses, shawls and blankets are cumbersome and a hindrance to baby's natural desire for activity and exercise.

Crying Is Beneficial

Many will agree that a play pen or play yard for the young infant relieves the mother in many ways, as well as aiding in the development of the child. At six months, the baby can be placed in the play yard every day. He will soon learn to sit, crawl and eventually to stand and walk.

Here he gives his arms, body and legs the necessary exercise and at the same time mother is permitted to attend to other household duties. Most play yards have a padded bottom and are slightly elevated from the floor. When placed here, the baby can neither do damage or harm himself.

When baby cries do not pick him up and get him. It is a natural temptation to do this, but bear in mind that crying is really beneficial. It causes baby to expand his chest. Of course, excessive crying is another thing. It may be a sign of some physical disorder and warrants investigation.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

ANON WAR MEMORIAL

Under "Fifteen Years Ago" you recite that Pickaway-co was honored by the unveiling of a bronze tablet for ever-remembering the War Savings stamp quota.

Did Pickaway-co send anything else to war bond buyers, for bonds and war savings stamps? If so there is nothing in the county sent to show it. Even little Five Points has erected a small monument honoring and commemorating its World War veterans.

Seven or eight years ago, a suggestion that steps be taken looking to the erection of a suitable monument for the World War veterans was made to the Rotary club but it was passed up without even a second.

If Cincinnati cannot even give the boys a tablet I would suggest you not bring the War Savings stamp tablet to light again.

Early Dope for Sportsmen

Only two copies are known of a book printed in old French at Lyons about the year 1540 by a Jacques Moderne that is able to give one no less than 27 "new and approved" receipts for the catching of fish, ducks and birds, with the hands rods, nets, bait.

A healthy digestion is worth protecting . . .

keep yours healthy. Cook with CRISCO . . . it digests quickly . . .

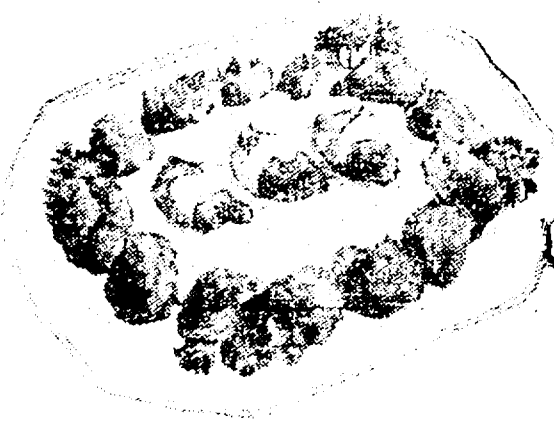

You'll find that Crisco-fried foods and Crisco pies are wholesome—they digest quickly. That's because Crisco is a creamy, light vegetable fat. It digests quickly itself!

Foods cooked with Crisco don't over-tax the stomach. Even the appearance of Crisco foods tells you so. Crisco foods, properly fried, aren't soggy—they're so crispy that they look "dry-fried"! And Crisco pastry doesn't bake up greasy-soaked and brown—it comes out of the oven flaky and golden.

Crisco is made by Crisco's own secret process from pure vegetable oils. Crisco is made to keep fresh, sweet, and creamy. Don't bother to put it in the ice-box. Crisco keeps "quick-digesting" for weeks and months, you know!

COIFFURE STYLES

No more enchanting feminine coiffures were displayed in public style show of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' Association in Chicago Wednesday than the coiffures "Fantastique" worn by Catherine Weary (left) and the "Cocktail" hairdress worn by Kay Griffin. The riot of small curls and the chic flower tucked in among them won wide approval. Its advantage, according to the young women who modeled it, is the ease with which it can be cared for.

WRECK TABULATION SHOWS COMPARISON IN 2 MONTHS' TIME

Accidents on curves, at intersections and on grades showed increases on the state highway system for February over January, according to a tabulation by the State Highway Department of traffic mishaps occurring on state highways outside municipalities during these two months.

In February there were 164 accidents on curves against 84 in January. 84 at intersections in February against 46 in January, and 63 on grades in February against 27 in January.

On the other hand, accidents involving pedestrians showed approximately 30 per cent decrease in comparative figures for the two months. In January there were 31 such accidents as compared with 22 in February.

Ice and snow created hazards particularly dangerous to traffic during February. Of the 165 mishaps chargeable to skidding during this month, 151 were due to ice and snow.
